It's full speed ahead for the four-piece crew from Nuremberg, Germany, blasting through the universe of modern rock music. Lead singer Silvia steers their interstellar spaceship, fueled by an explosive mixture of atmospheric verses and catchy choruses – goosebumps guaranteed.

Since 2014, Alveole have been redefining what a traditional rock band line-up of vocals, guitars, bass and drums can do. Their unique mix of rock, metal and electronic influences is far beyond all limitations of style and genre – sometimes empathic and critical, other times playful und witty, but always with a great feel for hit melodies.

Full throttle in the recording studio. Fast and furious on stage. With their high energy and addictive enthusiasm Alveole ignite the air of venues in Germany and entertain audiences with a vibrant and colorful live experience. Innovative guitar riffs are fused with edgy synth melodies while lead singer Silvia hogs the limelight with her balancing act between pop-diva and rock-shouter. It's an extraordinary, cliché-free and pure modern rock package. Following this formula, Alveole have conquered the hearts and minds of their audience over the last years.

Alveole have shown determination and ambition from the start. Just a few months after their formation in 2014, they released their first album "Rhythm Of Absurdity" and their single "Do You Use A Knife?", both of which have caught the attention of the press and several radio stations. Consequently, Alveole were featured in multiple German and international radio shows and were voted one of Franconia's top 10 bands by their fans during a band contest hosted by the StarFM radio station in 2017.

Since then, Alveole have been working on refining their musical style and creating innovative modern rock tunes. In October 2019 the second studio album "Andorra Effect" is released, which shows off the massive evolution of the band's sound.

Dreamy melodies, rhythms you can dance to, and raising hell: That's Alveole in a nutshell. Now it's time to unbuckle, get up and rock out!
